an intoxication state which is, in normal subjects, of short duration and of greatly increased sensory enhancement, but which does not superimpose hallucinogenesis....

a ... state of intoxication, one quite separate and distinct from that usually associated with the "psychotomimetic" or "hallucinogenic" drug. Rather than showing signs of stimulation, the subject becomes passive and relaxed and is aware of an integration of sensory perception with emotional state (although not experiencing the lassitude characteristic of [other drug]). Except for the consistent perceptual enhancement noted, there are no effects that can be called hallucinogenic. At these dose levels there is a considerable euphoria with an increased body awareness and increased receptiveness of visual, auditory, olifactory, and tactile sensation. The integration of sensory and emotional states induces in most subjects a feeling of security and an ability to cope with incidents and experiences that might have led, with drugs such as [other drug], to a state of anxiety and possible panic.

At low-dose levels ([X]-[Y] mg.), the main phenomena of clinical relevance are an intensification of emotions, heightened fantasy activity, confrontation of previously repressed or denied aspects of the self, serious examination of life values and priorities, recovery of emotionally relevant positive or negative memories, and enhanced insight into personal dynamics... Patients are usually able to maintain adequate reality contact at dose levels up to [Y] mg., whereas at higher dose levels, there is likely to be progressively greater loss of ego boundaries. Also, at higher dosages there is an increased probability that the drug will produce abreaction and catharsis of repressed emotions, deeper states of psychological regression, activation of archetypal material and peak experiences that can have profound religious or philosophical significance for the patient.

As soon as I looked at the mountain, I was peaking. I turned back and peered at the fire... inside the burning & crackling firewood were millions of individual objects all demanding my vision at once. The fire was truly alive and I saw each aspect of the flames and the base of the flames as they rose up.... Many colors of the rainbow were being exerted from the power of the flames, and it was the most awesome fire I had ever seen. Once I got settled in, and really opened my eyes to the stars, all I could say was 'Oh my god'. I was transported into my own world, surrounded by a spherical globe of light. Each of the stars were playing 'connect-the-dots' with others, and they all formed the outer edges of 'my' known universe. A slang term for [this drug] was dubbed '[this drug]' when it became popular in the early/mid 90's, and I realized why.

The dictionary definition of that word is 'A means of connection, a link or tie.' and 'The core or center', and that made perfect sense to me. I was the center of the universe in which everything around me was linked to one another. Every feeling, emotion, particle of energy, was all streaming and reflecting through the universe with one another. This was the deepest moment of my trip and I just laid there with my mouth hanging open, arms stretched...

results of a questionnaire given to twenty-six subjects about [this drug]:

5) How strong were the effects?

In response to the question about strength of effects, no one answered "1" (weakest) or "5" (strongest). Three people gave it a "2", two people gave it a "2.5", eight people gave it a "3", four people gave it a "3.5", seven people gave it a "4", and one person gave it a "4.5" (one person did not respond to this question). One respondent first answered using the Shulgin scale, and then converted that answer to the survey's format.

6) How visual was it?

Responses to the question about the level of visual effects ranged from "1" to "5", with the most common answer being a "3", and approximately equal numbers of people giving it a "2" and a "4". More people rated the visual effects as extremely low than rated them extremely high.

7) How heart opening was it?

Responses about the heart-opening character of [this drug] also indicated that most people thought it had moderate empathic effects. Answers were clustered mostly around "3", with ten people considering these effects stronger than a "3" and six considering them weaker...

Best Effects

Effects offered by a number of people as the "best" qualities of the experience included: the visuals (6 people), open communication (6), body sensations/response (5), happiness (3), energy (3), a clean/smooth high (3), and mental focus (2). My normal physical perceptions dissolved away from my awareness. My ears started to ring and I started to float off. I was acutely aware of a certain resonance of my aural perception, an electrical buzzing that fluctuated in synch with my visual perception. What I saw can only be described as a fantastically subtle multicolored phosphene, completely filling every area visually available. I say it in this way because I was simultaneously losing contact with my body, I could not tell if my eyes were open or shut, although I initially had the feeling that they were darting back and forth, from side to side. These feelings and sensations built up in intensity very quickly, a matter of seconds: I can remember this feeling of building intensity up to a point, and then I was not there in my body or in time. In the 10 to 15 minutes that my body was under the influence of the drug my mind was completely referenceless, there was no way for my consciousness to limit or gauge the stimuli my being was barraged with. I remember switching to a perception where the endless and intricate phosphene was love and the energy of light.

Report: 22511

The sense of self or personal ego is utterly lost. Awareness of individual identity evaporates. "I" and "me" are no more. Subject-object relationships dissolve, and the world is simply an extension of the body, or the mind. The world shimmers, as if it were charged with a high-voltage current, and the subject feels he could melt into walls, trees, other persons. It is not that the world lacks substance; it is real, but one is somehow coterminous with it. And it is fluid, shifting. One is keenly aware of the atomic substructure of reality...

As for identity, it is not really lost. On the contrary, it is found; it is expanded to include all that is seen and all that is not seen. What occurs is simply depersonalization. The subject looks back on his pre-drug existence as some sort of game or make-believe in which, for some reason, he had felt called upon to assume the reduced identity or smaller self called "I." Being had concentrated its attention at a single point in order to create, and play, the game of writer, banker, or cat burglar. Or so it now seems... Home at last, after that dreadful party, Being slips out of her stays, so to speak, and breathes an ontological sigh of celestial relief. Consciousness is allowed to scatter, and the subject at last can be Himself again.

The subject is somehow united with the Ground of his Being, with the life force that has created the visible world. He remembers. And what he remembers is the true identity that underlies all the individual egos of the world. He is one again with the universe, the eternal, the Absolute. He has found himself again. He is made whole again. That which he once knew, he has remembered.

To my great surprise, my ego identity was suddenly changed. I was my mother at the age of three or four; it must have been the year 1902. I was covering my mouth with my hand, painfully aware that something terrible had just happened. I had said something very bad, was criticized, and someone roughly put their hand over my mouth. From my hideout, I could see a scene with many relatives - aunts and uncles, sitting on the porch of a frame house, in old-fashioned dresses characteristic of that time. Everybody seemed to be talking, unmindful of me. I had a sense of failure and felt overwhelmed by the unrealistic demands of the adults - to be good, to behave myself, to talk properly, not to get dirty - it seemed so impossible to please them. After some time I was able to recognize to my great surprise that I was a spermatozoid and that the explosive regular impulses were generated by a biological pacemaker and transmitted to a long flagella flashing in vibratory movements...

Experiencing myself as a spermatozoid competing for the egg, I was conscious of all the processes involved... The consciousness of this spermatozoid was a whole autonomous microcosm, a universe of its own. There was a clear awareness of the biochemical processes in the nucleoplasm; in a nebulous atmosphere I could recognize the structure of the chromosomes, individual genes, and molecules of DNA. I could perceive their physiochemical configuration as being simultaneously elements of ancestral memories, primordial phylogenetic forms, nuclear forms of historical events, myths, and archetypal images. Genetics, biochemistry, mythology, and history seemed to be inextricably interwoven and were just different aspects of the same phenomenon...

During the sperm race my consciousness was alternating between that of the sperm heading toward its destination and that of the egg with a vague but strong expectation of an overwhelming event. At the time of conception these two split units of consciousness came together, and I was both germinal cells at the same time...

After the fusion of the germ cells the experience continued, still in the same hectic pace set by the sperm race. In a condensed and accelerated way, I experienced embryogenesis following conception. There was again the full conscious awareness of biochemical processes, cellular divisions, and tissue growth. There were numerous tasks to be met and critical periods to overcome. I was witnessing the differentiation of tissues and formation of new organs. I became the branchial arches, the pulsating fetal heart, columns of liver cells, and cells of the intestinal mucous membrane. An enormous release of energy and light accompanied the embryonal development. I felt that this blinding golden glow had something to do with the biochemical energy involved in the precipitous growth of cells and tissues. At one point, I had a very definite feeling of completion of the fetal development; this was experienced again as a great accomplishment - individual success as well as triumph of the creative force of nature.

We were listening to moody techno music. With each change in beat, with each skitter of sampled noise, I saw a brand-new and extremely detailed demonic realm swirl before me in cobalt, scarlet, purple gossamer hues. At moments there seemed to be some incredibly elegant yet violently orgiastic party taking place with beautiful females in evening gowns and men in Edwardian topcoats in the spacious parlors of a huge and opulent mansion. At other times there seemed to be bat or butterfly-winged creatures - long and quivering antennae, velvet coats and emerald eyes, stiletto talons - rising into otherworldly skies, wandering futuristic cities. I had an impression of tremendous vanity. "I" was being used as a mirror for [this drug] beings to admire themselves. But their realm was far beyond what can be expressed in ordinary language in its speed of transmutation, its shivering quicksilver beauty.

The worlds revealed were like endless facets of a twirling diamond - I felt the real possibility of being trapped inside of those facets, a kind of soul-prison, for eternity. That was the terror of it...

For a flicker of forever, I was imprisoned in a postmodern bar surrounded by gleaming mirrors with a hyperslick lounge lizard wearing a white mohawk and synthetic fabrics. He was sitting at the bar, drinking a highball. The graphics of this vision were high-res and hyperperfect. Other shards of the [this drug] realm shared this sci-fi quality. [this drug] was a postmodern demonic MTV psychedelic.

The sleek, rhythmical mesh of the music seemed woven into the lurid fabric of the darkness, the revelation of sinister forces coming to life behind my eyelids.

Like [other drug A], the level of visual organization of the [this drug] realm was far beyond anything that the synaptical wiring of my brain could create - it was, in its own peacock-feathery way, not just as real as this reality, but far more real, crackling with power. I felt from the entities exploring my mind a kind of contempt, a disdain for human beings trapped in our pitifully unsophisticated domain, or meat realm. They seemed somewhere between bemused and enraged that we had trespassed...

With my eyes opened, transformational energy seemed to be crawling over everything, flickering and receding like waves of sentient power - vampiric electricity. My hands looked and felt like claws made out of wires. When I opened my eyes on [other drug B], I also felt and saw energy passing like a wave form, but it was more human somehow. Here the speed of the waves was much faster and more brutal than the [other drug B] flares. The experience was unmammalian, futuristic, inhuman...

The word baroque doesn't even begin to describe the jaded emptiness and sublime beauty of that evanescent empire. A little bit like soft candle-flimmer worlds one sees on [other drug C] and [other drug D], but etched in perfect solid-state reality - more than photographic. The sleekness of the [this drug] dimension was beyond belief.

[this drug] produced a marked decrease in the proportion of high frequency associations... The decline in high frequency associations under [this drug] was related to an increase in low and medium strength association, with no increase in idiosyncratic associations... The [this drug] subjects produced less common, but not bizarre, associations. Strikingly, these less common associations under [this drug] were as reproducible (97.5 percent) as the high frequency baseline associations (94 percent). Usually, uncommon associations are not reproduced as readily as high frequency associations (3). This suggests that the highly reproducible "uncommon" associations produced by [this drug] are meaningful to the subjects but not normally accessible to consciousness. This finding accords with the enhanced "insight" reported by subjects under [this drug].

a vivid personal experience, about twenty-five years ago... Forty-five minutes after the second dosage of [this drug], when I was seated in a room by myself, not smoking, and where there was no possible source of smoke rings, an abundance of curling gray smoke rings was readily observed in the environment whenever a relaxed approach to subjective observation was used. Visually, these had complete reality; and it seemed quite unnecessary to test their properties because it was surely known and fully appreciated that the source of the visual phenomena could not be external to the body.

When I concentrated my attention on the details of the curling gray forms by trying to note how they would be affected by passing a finger through their apparent field, they melted away. Then, when I relaxed again, the smoke rings were there. I was as certain they were really there as I am now sure that my head is on top of my body...

No hallucinatory colors in any form were observed, nor was there any notable relative change in the observation of colors in the environment.

[Person A]: The only hallucinatory phenomena, as far as I know, were the gray smoke rings, and these had a reality, as I said, that left no question. I sat there and watched them.

[Person B]: were they moving?

[Person A]: They tended to move slightly, in slow motion.

[Person B]: If you turned your head, did they move with your head?

[Person A]: No, they filled the air around me. When I paid attention to them, they would disappear. Then I would relax, and they would appear again. This phenomenon was repeated many times.

[Person B]: They weren't in the periphery, when you tuned to face them? Did they disappear when you tuned to look at them? Would they go, like one of those little things in one's vitreous?

[Person A]: No, it was nothing of that kind. There were a great many of them.

[Person B]: There were many, many rings?

[Person A]: The visual field was filled.

[Person B]: Many small rings or one big ring?

[Person A]: They were fairly uniform in size.

a certain commonality exists in the kinds of feeling states usually named: ecstasy, empathy, openness, compassion, peace, acceptance, forgiveness, healing, oneness, and caring. Individuals are able, if their intention in taking the substance is serious and therapeutic, to use the state to resolve long-standing intrapsychic conflicts or interpersonal problems in relationships...

People feel they have true compassion, forgiveness, and understanding for those with whom they have important relationships. Most importantly, in terms of the therapeutic implications, they have empathy and compassion for themselves, for their ordinary, neurotic, childish, struggling persona or ego. The relative absence or attenuation of normal anxiety and fear in these states is perhaps the single most important feature in regard to their therapeutic value. People report being able to think about, talk about, and deal with inner or outer issues that are otherwise avoided because of the anxiety levels normally associated with those issues.

Feelings of being returned to a natural state of innocence before guilt, shame, and unworthiness arose are common...

The 'reverse spiral of my life' began. (My friend J said my eyes were open most of the time, so everything that occurred from this point on was apparently OEV's [open eyed visuals]). It all began with me being put into about 6 or so different settings, My classrooms at school, my office, my house, my car, parties I have attended recently, the dorm room I was currently tripping in and on my computer. I would enter a setting and see the people that belonged to that setting. I would see my mom and sister and dog at my house, I would see my boss and co-workers in the office...etc. I soon began to run through conversations and events that had occurred in the past week or so with these people. Every time I became bored of a certain setting I would take a big step in another direction of the room thus moving me into a different setting, and send me through an event that occurred that week in that setting. But I would always return back to the dorm room though. Soon events that had happened that week began to disappear, and events that happened a month ago began to cycle through my head. And soon enough these events disappeared as well and events that happened 3 months ago were going through my mind.

The experience of cosmic unity is characterized by transcendence of the usual subject-object dichotomy. The individual in this state becomes deeply aware of his or her unity with other people, nature, and the entire universe, and with the ultimate creative principle, or God. This is accompanied by an overwhelming positive affect that can range from peace, serenity and bliss to an ecstatic rapture. In this state the categories of space and time are transcended and subjects can perceive themselves as existing outside of the usual space-time continuum. In the extreme, they may experience eternity and infinity within a period lasting seconds or minutes of actual clocktime. [this drug]... has variously been described as having potent hallucinatory effects and as leading to apparently hostile reactions. More extensive appraisal of this compound in psychotherapeutic settings has confirmed the eyes-opened distortions and occasional hallucinatory phenomena, and strongly suggests that its characteristic property is one of causing projection, in the psychological sense, by the subject. This can produce visual distortions, delusions (alterations in social perceptions), and sometimes apparently hostile projections which, however, have never led to any overt actions.

I began to feel my spiritual world, my mind became transparent. I have no judgment, or emotions attached to the things that come to me. So my mind was transparent; what comes to me passes through me. I also felt I was just in the space the music was playing, not the one of a moment ago, not the future one. It is in this moment. As the music changes, the space changes, there was no trace of the old piece, right at the moment, no time lag, no speculation for the future. My inner side it seems doesn't bring things to me, what I noticed is from the outside, like I process the outside information as it is.

The flowers looked beautiful, much more beautiful than usual. They have a presence that is so distinctive, with great detail. But the beauty is not all. It is how we can view flowers, how we can be with them that is fantastic. It's almost like Buddha's vision. It's so easy to achieve to be with them. I just look at them long enough, then everything starts to float, the space is moving, until only me and flowers are steady. The flowers are so in front of me, just bare flowers with their unbelievable presence and beauty which is so intense so detailed so calm that it's almost menacing; and just bare me, facing each other, shining through each other. We are in our space, this is an alternate world moment (as profound as an out of body experience, this one is in another space with my body and my mind, totally there, and it's brief) some cosmic feeling, but it's not scary, it's totally beautiful, like in Buddha's presence. It's a space with just me and flowers looking at each other, there is no other distraction. The surroundings are floating, me and flowers are the fixation of each other's stare and all our soul and mind are just on each other. I did it again and again. And I could stop when I wanted to stop (just relax my attention). It's just so fantastic. When my mind felt less transparent, I began to feel sad that the people I love could not see it.

We went out for a walk to a park. The world I saw was just beautiful. The plants' presence, every leaf, every tiny twig, the pine tree, I felt that I have ignored so much beauty in my daily life.

Also after thinking of one thing, and moving on to the next, the thing I had thought a moment ago felt distant. During this time, my husband told me that I was unfair to his brother and mother. I didn't feel offended by his comments about me. It was discussed in a matter-of-fact way, which didn't bother me at all.

I felt quite normal. It seemed that the thoughts that normally would trouble me didn't matter to me or trouble me or distract me. I also didn't actually have a lot of thoughts. But the thoughts I had were quite nice and straightforward. It's simple and comfortable. I felt quite like the normal state without drug, only more comfortable. There was no dark feeling...

My thought about this drug is that it seems to make me more with the essence of myself. The things I really care about were closer to me, and the things that don't agree with me were more distant, and they didn't bother me (even the things that bother me often in the normal state). I

Data were collected on 40 subjects who took [this drug] for the first time and eight subjects who took [other drug] for the first time... Both drugs are active over a dose range of [X] to [Y] mg, with [this drug] being somewhat more potent. They are similar in effect and reach full intensity in approximately two hours, with a useful working plateau near maximum intensity lasting about five hours. The descent is quite gradual and generally euphoric, providing several additional hours of heightened clarity that may be used to reflect on the prior experiences. Consequently, an entire day is devoted to the experience. While the action of the two drugs is similar, [other drug] is somewhat more intense and perhaps a bit longer acting. An interesting property of both drugs is that, should the initial dose prove inadequate, additional doses may be taken as late as five hours into the experience with an immediate increase in effect.

In terms of activity, both of these drugs elicit empathic qualities, which led to free communication and feelings of well-being. At the same time, they have emotional-releasing qualities that afford exploration of repressed feelings, personal dynamics, and a wide range of thought levels, including the mystical levels of consciousness.

About one-fifth of the subjects reported physical side effects usually associated with hallucinogenic drugs, including transient muscle tension, nausea, and increased heart rate and temperature. While sometimes distracting, such symptoms did not interfere in most cases with the eventual enjoyment and constructive utilization of the experience. Nothing was observed that would contraindicate further use of these substances.

About 60% of the subjects reported that their performance improved on such items as clarity of thought, flow of insights, communication with others, visual perception, and perception of a universal level of meaning and significance. About 10% felt that their performance on such items worsened. Forty-one subjects said that they would repeat the experience, while four other subjects would not.

Within this context of mixed action, there is one substance that stands unique within the psychedelic category. This material is [this drug]. By and large, this drug does not produce profound sensory disruption or hallucinations. Of all the so-called substituted amphetamine type hallucinogens, [this drug] has remained popular and in high demand among recreational drug users. Although it does not generally produce hallucinations, it is unique because it powerfully enhances emotions and empathy. [this drug] earned a street reputation as the love drug, largely due to this latter quality. During the effects of the drug, subjects experience a sense of amplified emotions, empathy and a powerful emotional bond with other persons present.

[this drug] has pharmacological properties, both in laboratory animals and in biochemical assays, that clearly distinguish it from hallucinogenic substances such as [other drug]...

Thus, one may see that the classification of [this drug] as a hallucinogen was based more on legal and enforcement concerns, than on animal or human pharmacology...

[this drug] itself is really a unique compound among the so-called hallucinogens. It is not generally used for its hallucinogenic effect, but rather for its affect-enhancing qualities. One wonders whether it should be called a hallucinogen at all, based on its unusual pharmacology...

The visions had started. They reached a plateau of intensity deep in the night, and they continued at that level until about 4 o'clock... We were never more wide awake, and the visions came whether our eyes were opened or closed. They emerged from the center of the field of vision, opening up as they came, now rushing, now slowly, at the pace that our will chose. They were in vivid color, always harmonious. They began with art motifs, angular such as might decorate carpets or textiles or wallpaper or the drawing board of an architect. Then they evolved into palaces with courts, arcades, gardens--resplendent palaces all laid over with semiprecious stones. Then I saw a mythological beast drawing a regal chariot. Later it was though the walls of our house had dissolved, and my spirit had flown forth, and I was suspended in mid-air viewing landscapes of mountains, with camel caravans advancing slowly across the slopes, the mountains rising tier above tier to the very heavens. Three days latter, when I repeated the same experience in the same room with the same [persons], instead of mountains I saw river estuaries, pellucid water flowing through an endless expanse of reeds down to a measureless sea, all by the pastel light of a horizontal sun. This time a human figure appeared, a woman in primitive costume, standing and staring across the water, enigmatic, beautiful, like a sculpture except that she breathed and was wearing woven colored garments. It seemed as though I was viewing a world of which I was not a part and with which I could not hope to establish contact. There I was, poised in space, a disembodied eye, invisible, incorporeal, seeing but not seen.

There was a warm feeling in the total body and a light pressure in the head that changed with time into the feeling of a balloon without any anatomical definition. The usual color perception was not very much increased, and my vision was not sharpened as it was with [other drug A]. Both my tactile perception and auditory acuity were enhanced. The main effect for me was, paradoxically, an easier handling of the outer world. None of the jitters of [other drug B]. The body feeling is good, healthy, and I am at peace with the body-mind dualism. These are pretty much personal comments--I will write up the pharmacological points later.

It is apparent from table I that there is an increase of both intellectual and emotional stimulation with dosages up to [X] mg, whereas perceptual enhancement seemed not to be dose dependant. Perceptual distortion did not occur at any dose level.

In general the effects of [this drug] were the enhancement of intellectual and emotional thinking together with an increase in the level of fluency and attention while maintaining full communication capabilities. This compound is therefore similar to [other drug A] except that here the subjects were more active and had greater contact with the environment. The sense of added significance in ordinary events and motivation toward introspection were similar to that of the hallucinogens such as [other drug B], but with a complete lack of imagery or perceptual distortion. This compound on the basis of these preliminary trials would appear to be potentially as useful an adjunct to psychotherapy as [other drug A].

1:47 - Some stomach weirdness. Nothing mental yet, or really trippy at all.

2:06 - Very slow build, but I finally feel something in my head. My stomach feels like indigestion is occurring.

2:17 - I feel like something's changing with the energy, like it's leveling out. But nothing's really happened yet. My stomach appears to be settling somewhat.

2:30 - Palms and feet sweat, but STILL not much has developed. My body feels light and pleasant though. I'm enjoying some light IM conversation and reading Datura trip reports.

2:43 - It feels like it's really slowly getting more intense. I'm sweating considerably, but I also have been all day because it's hot. I also feel very communicative. This is rare for me on psychedelics. But I still feel unaltered mentally except for a very slight euphoria...

[Note: rest of description deleted because became polydrug at 2:57 with addition of cannabis]

Well, [this drug] both went both over and under my expectations for it. First, the positive. This chemical was really euphoric! It was exceptionally easy on my body. It had the property of feeling very transparent, especially before I vaporized [cannabis at 2:57]. In fact, I couldn't even tell I was affected for a while. It felt like I was coming up for a really long time. Completely absent were any form of body malaise or anxiety or nausea. It felt like it was entirely present in my head, and not at all in my body... In fact, it was quite like [other drug A] only a bit longer-lasting and cleaner feeling by far, but also less emotionally intense, at this dosage. It feels not the slightest bit toxic, unlike [other drug A] and [other drug B] and other euphoria-inducing phenethylamines.

Along with this, though, came some of the negatives. It was less psychedelic than several reports led me to believe. It was not visual at all, although I had some colorless swirling vortexes behind my closed eyes. But they were not particularly interesting. I tried to listen to music and drift, but I found myself getting bored and I really wanted some extra, external stimulation, like writing and talking. It was useful for self-analysis, but I felt mainly a push to just talk and bond with others... Also, I noticed that I was unable to tell I was fully affected until I smoked [cannabis]. Once I smoked, it kicked it into high gear almost instantly... My experience seemed to go against what others have said. I never was higher than a +2 at any point from [X]mg, and it was not intense at ALL until almost T+3:00 when I smoked.

twenty-five year old librarian with her friend not using drug, in a national park: I first noticed the effects of the drug when I opened my compact and caught a glimpse of myself in the small mirror. Staring back at me was an old, wizened face mottled with warts and whiskers. The eyes were sunk deep in sockets, the mouth was puckered like the ring of an orange peel, and the skin was blotched by a dull brown color...

I noticed that D. had taken off his shirt and was watching me with his hands propped under his head. He immediately struck me as a beautiful young man, although, in reality, he has an interesting, but not handsome face as understood in conventional terms. "You're divine," I told him. He held a flower in his mouth on which he seemed to be playing a seductive tune. I imagined him as a young Greek god frolicking through the woodlands, piping his merry tune. Wood nymphs, lake spirits, elfin gods, and all the animal life of the forest gamboled after him over the hills, dales, and streams. I became a white dove turning slow cartwheels in the sky, watching the tiny figures recede into groves and emerge again on a luscious field. It was one of the most beautiful things I've ever seen. In the open meadow, he lay down gazing at the clouds as the sun waxed his limbs. His band of followers had disappeared and a shower of rose petals fell from a magnificent rainbow, flecking his body with tiny flakes of all different colors.

Taken at 10:15 AM: The music didn't appeal to me, most of the time I could just ignore it. Around 1:15 PM, I noticed that music was a bit complicated. It seemed that there were a lot of elements, even though sometimes I could feel the voice had a lot of feelings. I didn't care about music. And I felt I was shut out, kind of like nothing was going on. I complained to him that music was too complicated and I wanted him to change it. So he changed the music.

I am not sure if the transition period was passed at that moment. After he changed the music, I felt really good. I was high. For one moment, I felt it's like I was in my parents' hands, in their loving presence. I was relaxed, no worries. It felt warm, stable. I felt good all the rest of the experience. But it also seemed that that's the most I felt.

I went to take a shower. Even though I could focus on thinking something, there were not a lot of contents. I also laughed when I tried to think of the movie we watched the night before. All the thoughts were brief.

I didn't feel as empty as I felt in the [other drug] experience. But there was not a lot going on in my mind. It's quite simple. It's not rich at all, kind of boring. Food didn't taste interesting, but edible. At about 6 PM, we went to watch a movie. We tried to watch one, but it seemed that we could not follow it readily, so we watched some part of a comedy again, and I laughed a lot. After that I was down to the baseline enough to watch a more complicated movie. At that time, I noticed the world was more expansive and more connected and richer than what I felt when I was high on the drug.

[V]mg - Multiply the last paragraph by two. Slight morphing and patterning starts to become evident. Objects start to seem much more rounded and organic. Various physical symptoms such as a slight rise in body temperature, slight thirst, increased heart beat. Sensuality starts to get quite pronounced.

[W]mg - Approaching the true shores of psychedelia. Strong patterning effects (though these tend to decrease the more one uses this compound). There are surprising and remarkable consistencies among volunteers' reports of contact with nonmaterial beings.... Volunteers find themselves on a bed or in a landing bay, research environment, or high-technology room. The highly intelligent beings of this "other" world are interested in the subject, seemingly ready for his or her arrival and wasting no time in "getting to work." There might be one particular being clearly in charge, directing the others. Volunteers frequently comment about the emotional quality of the relationships: loving, caring, or professionally detached.

Their "business" appeared to be testing, examining, probing, and even modifying the volunteer's mind and body. Sometimes testing came first, and after results were satisfactory, further interactions took place. They also communicated with the volunteers, attempting to convey information by gestures, telepathy, or visual imagery. The purpose of contact was uncertain, but several subjects felt a benevolent attempt on the beings' part to improve us individually or as a race.

experience of cosmic unity. Its basic characteristics are transcendence of the subject-object dichotomy, exceptionally strong positive affect (peace, tranquility, joy, serenity, and bliss), a special feeling of sacredness, transcendence of time and space, an experience of pure being, and a richness of insights of cosmic relevance. Subjects frequently talk about timelessness of the present moment and say that they are in touch with infinity. They refer to this experience as ineffable and emphasize the failure of linguistic symbols and the structure of our language to convey the nature of this event and its significance. Descriptions of cosmic unity are usually full of paradoxes violating the basic laws and the very essence of Aristotelian logic. An individual can, for example, talk about this experience as being contentless and yet all-containing; everything that he can possibly conceive seems to be included. He refers to a complete loss of his ego and yet states that this consciousness has expanded to encompass the whole universe. He feels awed, humbled, and utterly insignificant but, at the same time, has the feeling of an enormous achievement and experiences himself in cosmic proportions, sometimes to the extent of feeling identified with God. He can perceive himself and the rest of the phenomenal world as existing and not existing at the same time; and the forms of material objects as being empty and emptiness as having a form. The subject in this state feels that he has access to direct insightful knowledge and wisdom about matters of fundamental and universal significance. Usually this does not involve concrete information about specific technical details that could be pragmatically utilized. Rather, it is a complex revelatory insight into the essence of being and existence. This insight is typically accompanied by feelings of certainty that such knowledge is ultimately more real and relevant than our concepts and perceptions regarding the world that we share in a usual state of consciousness.

At very low doses, the visual effects of [this drug] are very subtle. Colors become more vivid and light takes on a luminous, ethereal quality. Slight distortions in the visual field present themselves, but only subtly.

As the dosage and strength of [this drug] increase, so do the visual effects. At slightly higher doses... Objects also begin to visually flow and melt with movement being the most defining characteristic of these visuals. All the world becomes movement, change, and flow. Light becomes extremely beautiful at this point and can be endlessly engrossing.

At still higher doses and potency the visuals become even stronger. Patterns of flow, movement, and change are no longer confined to the surface of objects, but can fill all of the visual space of a person's perception...

At these doses, it is common to perceive oneself as embodied in these different patterns as the normal sense of one's physical body is transcended. Spiritual explorers may feel themselves as geometric shapes filling a room or extending on out into space. Scenes may also begin to unfold in these visions, complete with characters, architecture, and other places and other times. The geometric forms can also coalesce into definite figures or personas that may interact with the visionary or may present a form of communication.

At the highest doses, the physical world melts away and one becomes completely immersed in the visionary world of [this drug]. Profound states of consciousness are reached therein and revelations and awakenings are common. Deep levels of synaesthesia are also reached where sounds, colors, smells, movements, and all the senses cross over into each other, opening the visionary up to radically altered ways of experiencing and appreciating the senses and their methods of processing information.

The visual aspects of [this drug] are beautiful and can be infinitely engrossing. They fill the world with a profound sense of wonder and awe, revealing the magic and mystery that embraces all things. Because [this drug] affects the senses minimally, everything appears as it does usually. There are no hallucinations, illusions, or distortions, simply a great aura of peace and calm and well-being. It is not possible to pretend, as it often is with hallucinatory drugs, that the experience is coming from without. Clearly, all the important effects, including the ability to be free of anxiety and desire, are part of the human repertory, often unexpressed, to be sure, but there nonetheless.

I first went to a place that seemed to completely lack the qualities of this world as we know it. I seemed to transcend time and space and I lost complete identification with the "real" world. The experience seemed to me to be as if I was going from this world back to another world before this life had occurred... The actual changing from this life to whatever was before this life seemed to be involved in a very bright silver mass of energy with very strong electrical current... Strangely enough I felt that I had been in that mass of energy at one time before. When I was there everything seemed to make sense... It was a very beautiful world, one in which love was very much a part... The basic theme that I perceived... was that life continues to go on and we are basically some form of essence from a Supreme Being and we are part of that Supreme Being... We really don't have the final control per se over life or death.

the physiological effects of [this drug] are much more intense than with [other drug A]. The patient has a rapid heart rate, widely dilated pupils with photophobia and an extremely dry mouth. A somewhat similar intoxication picture can be seen with [other drug B] intoxication...

Because of the intense physiological and psychological effects of [this drug], there appears to be a higher incidence of acute panic reactions associated with the drug experience than with other psychotomimetic drugs including [other drug A]. This increased incidence, appears to be related to the duration of the reaction (e.g., the patient feels the reactions will never end and he is going "crazy"), also the intensity of the [other drug C]-like peripheral effects, and misinterpretation of psycho-physiological effects (e.g., the patient feels his rapid heartbeat and shortness of breath are a heart attack)...

The common denominator of this otherwise rich and ramified group of phenomena is the subject's feeling that his or her consciousness has expanded beyond the usual ego boundaries and has transcended the limitations of time and space...

Many experiences belonging to this category are interpreted by the subjects as regressions in historical time and explorations of their biological or spiritual past. It is not unusual in psychedelic sessions to experience quite concrete and realistic episodes identified as fetal and embryonic memories. Many subjects report vivid sequences on the level of cellular consciousness which seem to reflect their existence in the form of a sperm or ovum at the moment of conception. Sometimes the regression appears to go even further and the individual has a convinced feeling of reliving memories from the lives of his or her ancestors, or even drawing on the racial and collective unconscious. On occasion, [this drug] subjects report experiences in which they identify with various animal ancestors in the evolutionary pedigree or have a distinct feeling of reliving episodes from their existence in a previous incarnation.

Some other transpersonal phenomena involve transcendence of spatial rather than temporal barriers. Here belong the experiences of merging with another person into a state of dual unity or completely identifying with him or her, turning into the consciousness of an entire group of persons or expanding one's consciousness to the extent that it seems to encompass all of mankind. In a similar way, one can transcend the limits of the specifically human experience and tune into what appears to be the consciousness of animals, plants, or even inanimate objects. In the extreme, it is possible to experience the consciousness of all creation, of our planet, of the entire material universe...

If one smokes a smaller amount of [this drug], say around [X] mg., they will tend to experience only the visual aspect of the high, without getting in touch with gnomes and discarnate entities. Following is a friend's description of [this drug] visuals produced by smoking [X] mg. doses every 20 to 30 minutes. "The vibration is still very strong at this level... At the peak of the [X] mg. tokes, brilliantly changing latticework becomes apparent within. A gooey liquid of phosphorescent brilliance knits itself into neon lattices of emerald green and iridescent blue against a molten gold background. Always changing, always new, always novel, these geometric storms of shape and color never cease to amaze me with their beauty and intricacy; something one can FEEL as well as see. Clouds of molten gold liquid, boiling, seethe into arabesques and chainwork networks. Each node of each net and lattice form a jeweled point of incredible pure color, all rotating and pulsating through the eyes, brain, and stomach, as one becomes a transparent electric ghost deciphering mysto-glyphs for eternity!"

This next experience comes from a friend who smoked a full-strength dose. "The stuff hit me instantaneously. MILLIONS of brilliantly colored little 'skull clowns' swarmed me in a most visionary way while emitting crickling, tinging sounds which looked like violet sparks coming out of their mouths. These tiny skull clowns were laughing most musically as I died in the light. Melt down - feels like drowning and being electrocuted at the same time. Some fear is good though, and pretty soon the skull clown swarm had laughed me through death to a place of jeweled coiling roots and capillaries, swaying endlessly in a gem lit sea... The glowing, ember-like afterimage instantly swirls and shatters into blue and red sizzling domes that pinwheel ecstatically into a Creative, God-Thing with a trillion jeweled eyes that dissolves into an atomic ocean. This is the multi-eyed God that is my Creator, Master, Destroyer. I am nothing compared to this Thing which has no ego boundaries whatsoever and can turn into anything it damn well wishes, even death itself if it wants to!"

I saw the center of the flower slowly eating away at the petals... Then in a flash of insight I realized to my horror that the black thing was actually devouring me. I was the flower and this foreign, creeping thing was eating me! ...

I felt myself dissolving into the terrifying apparition, my body melting in waves into the core of blackness, my mind stripped of ego and life and, yes even death. In one great crystal instant I realized that I was immortal. I asked the question: "Am I dead?" But the question had no meaning. Meaning was meaningless. Suddenly there was white light and the shimmering beauty of unity. There was light everywhere, white light with a clarity beyond description. I was dead and I was born and the exultation was pure and holy. My lungs were bursting with the joyful song of being. There was unity and life and the exquisite love that filled my being was unbounded. My awareness was acute and complete. I saw God and the devil and all the saints and I knew the truth. I felt myself flowing into the cosmos, levitated beyond all restraint, liberated to swim in the blissful radiance of the heavenly visions.

I wanted to shout and sing of miraculous new life and sense and form, of the joyous beauty and the whole mad ecstasy of loveliness. I knew and understood all there is to know and understand. I was immortal, wise beyond wisdom, and capable of love, of all loves. Every atom of my body and soul had seen and felt God. The world was warmth and goodness. There was no time, no place, no me. There was only cosmic harmony. It was all there in the white light. With every fiber of my being I knew it was so.

There is little perceptual phenomena, depersonalization, or disturbances of thought, which usually characterize these latter drugs. More intense emotional reactions were reported by a few of the subjects. However, they did not feel overwhelmed by, or unable to maintain perspective about their condition. Intense fear and anxiety reactions rarely occurred at this dose level. In some, the drug appeared to induce a state of greater openness in which the individual's responsiveness to music was enhanced and the capacity for rapport and empathy increased. "Very nice, indeed," said Ben, "It shows potential, Shura. Quite a bit of visual; comfortable body, reasonably strong effect. I'd say it's pushing a plus-three." [Ben, X mg]

"Good day, for me," said Ben, "Good talking. Body felt fine. No hints of trouble what I can recall, physical or mental. Plus-three and generally a positive experience." [Ben, X mg]

"I had a good one, too, although it was light. There was a slightly body tremor for a while, but it wasn't a problem, just felt like good energy. No dark corners. No particular insights, but I was too busy talking to go inside much. It was a friendly material, for me. What else? Oh, yes. I'd put it down as a plus-two, definitely. And I wouldn't hesitate to take it again." [John, Y mg]

"I was really cold, most of the time. I'm just beginning to warm up now, in fact. The food probably helped. As for insights, well -" she paused, "I didn't feel like doing much talking, so I reviewed some things that've been happening recently - difficult interactions with a certain professor, a couple of good discussions I've had recently with other people, that kind of thing - and I was able to get a fresh view, see some things I hadn't seen before. So I'd have to say there was insight, yes." She smiled impishly, "Of course, it might not have been the drug. Maybe it was just giving myself a chance to be quiet and think for a while. These days, I'm so damned busy, I forget I should make time to just sit and think about what's going on." [Leah, W mg]

Leah concluded, "I'd say it was a plus-three, pretty strong, with the only negative being the cold; I was just as cold inside the house as outside. I couldn't seem to get warm anywhere. Otherwise, mainly okay, but I've had a lot more fun with other materials." [Leah, W mg]

"I'll second that," said Ruth, "Okay for me, too, but not much fun, not the kind we've had on other things. Of course, I was a wee bit worried about George, and that probably influenced me. It wasn't more than a two-plus, I'd say, and I'm not sure I'd get too excited at the prospect of taking it again, to tell you the truth." [Ruth W mg]

"I was off baseline, but not very much. Even after the supplement, I couldn't feel anything more than a pleasant relaxation, about a single vodka-with-juice's worth." [Alice, Y mg]

"I had a fine time. Plus-three, body good, mind brilliant, thoughts incisive, observations profound - as usual, I might add." [Shura, Y mg]

"Don't remember any great insights, but I was too busy exchanging wild tales of fond memories, most of the time, to bother looking for any. I think [Y] milligrams is about as high as I want to go, though." [Shura, Y mg]

[Shura] looked over at George. "You got the overload this time, friend. Sorry about that. Plus-three and much too strong in the visuals department?"

"Can't figure it out," muttered Shura, "That wide a range is very unusual; Alice barely plus-one with a total of Y milligrams, and you blasted out of your skull with X."

I had admired this photograph before, in my pre-[this drug] days an hour or an aeon ago, but now its precision became reality and the temperature plunged and fine crystals of snow whipped across my face and I circled like an eagle above the crags and snowy summits of the mountain top. An expedition of climbers waved up at me and I lifted one talon to wave back...

Timmy was the cat and the apocalyptic smell had issued from a single turd he had deposited in the middle of the floor.

I turned my attention from Timmy's tangible residues to Timmy himself. He stretched himself with infinite grace and arched his back to begin - The Ballet. Leaping through time and space, he hung like Nijinsky - suspended in the air for a millennium, and then, drifting languidly down to the ground, he pirouetted to a paw-licking standstill. He then stretched out one paw in a tentative movement and propelled himself into a mighty spiral, whirling into cosmic dust, then up to his toes for a bow to his creation.

He was a cat no longer - but Indra, the primeval God dancing the cosmic dance in that time before time, setting up a rhythmic flux in non-being until it at last had attained to Life. The animating waves of the Dance of Creation pulsed all around me and I could no longer refuse to join in the dance...

there was a feeling of foreboding. The light was there, but [this drug] was the body of Satan. The voices of people were extremely distorted -- males sounded like frogs -- children sounded like they were talking through synthesizers to imitate outer space people in science fiction movies. In fact I felt that I was somehow sent into an anti-universe where everything looked the same as normal but was a cold and empty imitation. I felt I was a fallen angel.

it began with a fast-rising sense of excitement and wonder, with an undertone of "Now you've done it," but dominated by a sense of, "WOW, This Is IT!" There was a tremendous sense of speed and acceleration. In perhaps 10 more seconds these feelings built to an intensity I had never experienced before. The entire universe imploded through my consciousness. It's as if the mind is capable of experiencing a very large number of objects, situations and feelings, but normally perceives them only one at a time. I felt that my mind was perceiving them all at once. There was no distance, no possibility of examining the experience. This was simply the most intense experience possible; a singularity, a white-out (as opposed to a black out), I have little memory of the state itself. I have no memory, for example, of whether my eyes were opened or closed. After some seconds or minutes, it started to fade and came to resemble a merely intense psychedelic state. Here I had the feeling, a visualization of being part of the universe of beings, all active in our daily, interwoven tasks, still moving at an incredible rate, and with a longing for a single group / organism awareness and transcendence. In a few more minutes it faded to an alert (+ one) state with an additional sense of awe and wonder, relief, and a strong feeling of gratitude toward the universe in general, for the experience.

It is a rather intensely matter-of-fact +3. Is it interesting? Yes, but mostly in expectation of further developments. Is it inspiring? No. Is it negative? No. Am I glad I took it? Yes. Not glad. Satisfied and contented. This is a controlled +3. No threat. The body is all right. Not superbly healthy--but OK. Of no

[this drug] ... is active over a dose range of [X] to [Y] m.g. It reaches full intensity in approximately two hours, with a useful working plateau near maximum intensity of about five hours. The descent is gradual and generally euphoric, providing several additional hours of heightened clarity to ponder about and assimilate the events of the day. While preserving some of the centering effects of [other drug A], for most subjects it results in more emotional opening and permits a wider exploration of inner feelings and freedom of thought. In this regard it is considerably more like [other drug B], although free of the driving effect of the latter. The [this drug] subject is also less likely to fall into holes of deeply repressed material. The long duration of peak effects provides the opportunity to explore a variety of interests and perceptions. [this drug] promises to be a more powerful working material than [other drug A]. While permitting a greater range of exploration, it also permits repressed material to surface more readily, sometimes without the saving, centering quality of [other drug A]. This can at times be uncomfortable.

My partner and I looked at each other at the two-hour mark and thought, "Do we notice anything yet?" It took going to our own room, without the stimulation of other people and loud music, to feel it come on. As we lay next to each other in the sweet quiet of our bed we had sensual interactions. We felt a gentle onset of closed-eye visuals taking over our inner space. Music was also enhanced, as we explored more of our sense of touch. After having sex, we joined the group again and noticed that, along with this substance being fun in a one-on-one setting, at this dose it is good for social interacting as well! My partner laughed and laughed as he talked to a friend. We carried on for hours in this manner. After about ten hours, people started coming down and going to sleep. I felt the weight of my self, that kind of genuine self. It's the one before we know self-esteem, self-respect, self-pity or selfishness. It's the genuine being of my self, the kind that relates to my heart, that we felt strongly when we fall in love, that can be touched by what it can feel. This self seems to be a common ground between me and other people. It presented itself so strong, so solid, and I realized I was a bit distant from my self in reality, and now I was with my self at home. It was what I felt before I got out of the protection of my parents, and set out to explore the real world. I felt at home, and I felt human. Then I began a journey about how I feel about people. I felt my parents with their very good hearts, my brother with a soft heart but not weak, my sister with a still very innocent heart, and my baby nieces still new and whole. And every grown up has been hurt in some way or another, that their self was shadowed or diminished, or their self was buried in a steel seal of defense (mother-in-law). It's extraordinary to feel people in this way. There is no judgment, just a feeling associated with the people that comes up to my mind (my family and my husband's parents and brother), not about wrong or right, just feeling them, and sometimes these feelings so touched me that I was in tears (when I thought of my grandparents). Seeing my family in photos is great. I could feel them. It's much richer than without the drug.

Then we saw flowers. The flowers have amazing beauty and presence. They were very gentle. I could connect with them very easily, feeling the flowers and the flowerness, the being.

I felt very strengthless all along the way. The sex was wonderful. This was the only sex that has lived up to my imagination about how I should feel in my fantasy sex. This was it. Although psychedelic sex is generally great, with psychedelics it seems that I can not feel the fine details of genital contact which I am able to feel in the normal state without drugs. With this drug I felt the fine detail, and the yearning and desire to be penetrated were very much there and every actual thrust was great and I just wanted more.

[this drug]... is characterized mainly by its effects of feeling enhancement, sharpening of attention, increased fluency in associations and communication... Yet the quality that makes [this drug, other drug X, other drug Y, and other drug Z] valuable to psychotherapy is that of facilitating access to otherwise unconscious processes, feelings, or thoughts, a quality that deserves to be called "psychedelic" in the sense of the word intended by Osmond: "mind-manifesting." Since they differ from the hallucinogens in that they do not bring about the perceptual phenomena, depersonalization, or changes in thinking characteristic of the latter and yet share with them an intensification of awareness, they might well be called non-psychotomimetic psychedelics.

The deeper I went, the more familiar and wonderful it was. I felt I was going to my eternal home...

I died, it seemed, as completely as one can die and found myself at one with all that is, beyond space and time, birth and death, bathed in love - it was always changing - and then, the dualism even of this oneness gave way and mind opened to the experience of the clear light, of which, later, I could really say nothing but that the experience seemed to be the crowning glory of all that is and isn't. I felt that I had experienced what a Hindu text described as greater than if ten thousand suns were to explode in the sky. I don't know how I can say this because none of these experiences can be remembered any more than the Pacific Ocean can fit into a thimble, but I came back saying that the clear light was pure, unborn, ecstatic - things like that. On that evening I emerged from the clear light into a calmer, perfect, absolute, vast clarity with no sense of identity or physicality in it, a state not characterized by any mundane attributes such as existence, experience, or anything.

At 5 times the minimal perceptible dose of [other drug] or other psychedelic drugs, marked hallucinogenic or psychotomimetic changes are usually observed.
